Pub: 2007                      124 pages

Drinian Press is in search of readers! We believe in our publications and maintain that they rival the quality of traditional publishers. Through the use of modern technology we are able to produce books at a reasonable price for two markets. Booksellers can order books directly through Ingram, Baker & Taylor, or from the publisher at a standard discount. Since our books are returnable, they are qualified to appear on the shelves of the retail market. At the same time, our titles are available through major online retailers like Amazon, Barnes and Noble, and Powell's (not our own private "in-house" website). Our prices are in line with high-volume distributors. At the current time, we are able to provide a number of free copies to public libraries who will catalog and circulate our books. Our mission is to create a link between writers and readers in the exchange of ideas. Only by the closing of this circle does the artist's dream become a reality.

Drinian Press supports emerging authors of quality fiction, creative non-fiction, and poetry. We also place an emphasis on cooperation with other small presses and artists in north central Ohio to promote literary arts. By taking advantage of technological advances in the printing industry, we are able to provide books for the online market as well as "brick and mortar" retail stores. Our authors play an active part in promoting their work through presentations and book signings.
